EACH PERSON IS A COIN OF GOD

When Jesus was asked by the Pharisees' disciples and the Herodians whether or not they should pay taxes, they were trying to back Jesus into a corner by raising an issue of deep division among the Jewish people.

The Jews were burdened by having to pay two taxes: a "temple tax" to the Jewish authorities and the tax to the occupying Romans. The Romans taxed lands, harbours and imports. Herod the Great taxed agriculture and any merchandise bought or sold. Taxes were also laid on property and duties were collected at the gates of cities. To add insult to injury the coins used for the taxes had an imprint of Caesar on them, with an inscription implying his divinity. This was an insult to the monotheistic Jews who forbade any images to the gods.

The two groups who confronted Jesus represented two current and contrary positions. The Pharisees didn't approve of the Gentile rule over the Jewish people, while Herodians collaborated with the Romans. To pay tax was a constant reminder of the Roman oppression. If Jesus agreed that tax should be paid, he would have lost any credibility he had with the Jews; if he favoured not paying the tax, the Romans would have seized him for promoting insubordination.

Jesus just simply asks for the coin they were carrying. It had Caesar's image on it, with the titles of political power and divine status. If Jesus' opponents had the coin, they must have been using it to pay the Roman tax. Hence he calls them hypocrites - and so they were.

How can we "give back to Caesar what belongs to Caesar and to God what belongs to God?" Our involvement in the life of a nation means more than just paying taxes. We cannot exempt ourselves from involvement in the betterment of members of our civic community. We cannot live isolated religious lives - not if we believe that the reign of God is in our midst. Each of us has to decide how we can participate in bringing about this freedom. We are called to be God's active instruments and voices in civic life.

Each person is a "coin of God." We belong to God and God has stamped the divine image into each of us. Jesus might be saying to his inquisitors: "Give to Caesar the few coins you have, but remember that each of you is a treasure to God and you owe God your primary and total loyalty." When the divine image in a person or people is violated each of us has the obligation to come to the aid of the ones in need. In doing so, we are repaying to God what is God's.

Fr Peter Toan Nguyen OP, PP

29TH SUNDAY YEAR A —A REFLECTION

Today's Gospel contains, perhaps, one of the best-known verses of Scripture, "Give to Caesar the things that are Caesars, and to God the things that are God's." The context is Jesus engaged in teaching in the Jerusalem Temple, and the scene reflects the growing tension between him and the nation's leaders that would soon lead to his death.

The question put to Jesus by the Pharisees and the Herodians was "is it permissible to pay taxes to Caesar or not?" It was set to trap him: "If he encouraged the tax, he would offend both the Pharisees and the common people who resented it. If he condemned the tax, he could be denounced to the Roman authorities as a political trouble-maker."

What then of his reply, 'Give to Caesar what belongs to Caesar; and to God what belongs to God'? First, it won the day. Matthew reports that "when [they] heard [his reply], they were amazed, and they went away." The denarius used for paying the tax had the image of the Roman emperor, Caesar. Thus his coins could be returned to him in taxes.

But what even more explains the amazement of those present was the way that Jesus' answer transformed the issue. Jesus had made a conversation about taxes and Caesar into talk about God as well. "Give to God the things that are God's." All present knew the first commandment of the Law, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and strength."

Jesus' answer reminds us that our secular responsibilities are not to be separated from our love of God. Indeed, the Second Vatican Council has reminded us, especially the lay faithful, "to seek the kingdom of God by engaging in temporal affairs." The Council immediately clarifies this: "the laity, when engaged in the work and business of society and in the ordinary circumstances of social life and family, which as it were, constitute their very existence ... contribute to the sanctification of the world, as from within like leaven."

When we fulfill our responsibilities as members of society, we are giving to God what belongs to God. We find God in the Eucharist on Sunday, and we also find God when we fulfill our family and civic responsibilities on weekdays. Indeed, Sunday's Eucharist and daily life are linked for the Eucharist is the source of our strength to contribute to the world's sanctification and in the Eucharist we offer ourselves and our good works to the Father through Jesus' sacrifice on Calvary.
